

Subject: Urgent Office Design Project Update - No More Orange!

Hello Mitchell and Marc,

Joel Willis here, with an urgent message regarding our Office Design project. I don't mean to alarm you, but I just had the most bizarre dream last night. And in this dream, I was being attacked by a swarm of angry, mutant oranges. It was a terrifying nightmare, to say the least.

So, to protect my sanity, I feel compelled to take action. Effective immediately, I am instituting a strict "No Orange" policy for the entire duration of this project. I know it may seem drastic, but I simply cannot take any chances with the color orange after that traumatizing dream.

Now, I understand that some of you may be attached to the color orange. Maybe you have fond childhood memories of drinking Tang, or perhaps you just really like the citrusy hue. But I'm here to tell you - it's time to let go. Orange has had its time in the sun, and it's time to move on to more sophisticated color choices.

Instead, I suggest we go with a color scheme that will not make me feel like I'm being chased by killer citrus, like a classic navy blue or a sophisticated charcoal gray. Or, if we're feeling daring, maybe a bold and energizing shade of red or a calming seafoam green. Anything but orange, folks. Anything but orange.

I hope you can understand the severity of this situation. I know this may seem like a silly request, but I just can't stress enough how serious I am about this. I mean, have you ever seen a grown man cry at the sight of a pumpkin? Trust me, you don't want to find out. Thank you for your cooperation, and I look forward to a bright (but definitely not orange) future for this project.

Best regards,

Joel "No More Orange" Willis
